Why Sponsor the Ryther Luncheon?

Early intervention can save lives. Each year, Ryther serves over 2,500 young people and their families who struggle with mental and behavioral health through an array of therapeutic services. Addressing mental health issues early can prevent long-term negative consequences, such as substance use, academic underachievement, and chronic mental health challenges. As a sponsor, you have the opportunity to make a meaningful difference in the lives of young people, shaping a brighter, more mentally resilient future for all.

Washington's Youth Mental Health Crisis...

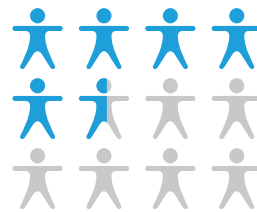

On average, it takes 11 years for someone to receive treatment after the first signs of a mental health condition. That means a teen experiencing major depression at 14 may not get help until 25—half a lifetime of unnecessary suffering. For many, that wait is simply too long.

Early intervention is critical. Timely support can change lives, setting young people on a path to a healthier future. By supporting Ryther, you help ensure youth receive the mental health care they need—when they need it most.
